INTRODUCTION.

INTRODUCTION.

IT was on the 5th of December, 1776, that five students of William and Mary College met in the old Raleigh Tavern and organized the first chapter of Phi Beta Kappa. In 1780, charters were granted to Harvard and Yale, and a few years later to Dartmouth. From that time until the formation of the United Chapters, the Alpha of each State granted charters to those institutions in its State in which new chapters were established.

In accordance with this custom, the Alpha of Ohio, in the Western Reserve University, granted to Kenyon College permission to organize the Beta Chapter of that State, and on the 29th of June, 1858, was held the first meeting. The charter members were John W. Andrews, LL.D., the Rev. Thomas Mather Smith, D.D., and Prof. Hamilton Lamphere Smith, LL.D., of whom only the last-named survives, an honored professor of Hobart College.

The policy of Kenyon in selecting new members has always been conservative, and though established for over forty years, her chapter roll does not contain two hundred and fifty names.

By a resolution passed at the last annual meeting, every member is urged to procure and wear a key. Though diversity of opinion exists, it seems to be the custom among a majority of the members to have two stars engraved in the upper left-hand corner of the key, indicating the second chapter in the State in the order of its establishment.

For the greater part of its existence the Kenyon Chapter has made literary meetings throughout each college year an important feature of its proceedings, and the records of these old programmes are interesting reading.

In regard to the subject-matter of the following pages, the Committee desires to bespeak lenient criticism, for, though no efforts have been spared to make it as full and correct as possible, it is only natural to expect that many errors exist which, it is hoped, may be corrected in subsequent editions.

LEWIS C. WILLIAMS,
GEORGE P. ATWATER,
